May 22, 2020

Dear Secretary Pompeo, Acting Secretary Wolf, and Secretary Scalia:

We write in response to the White House Executive Proclamation of April 22, 2020, which asked your offices to “review nonimmigrant programs and ...recommend other measures appropriate to stimulate the United States economy.”

On behalf of over 30,000 Academic Student Employees, Postdocs and Academic Researchers at the University of California, approximately half of whom are international students and scholars, we write to ask that you urge the Executive to reverse any limitation or suspension of immigration programs. We ask that you urge preservation and expansion of current programs critical for non-immigrant visas holders and visa applicants in higher education and academic research, such as Optional Practical Training (OPT) and Curricular Practical Training (CPT), the J-1 exchange visitor program, the H-1 specialty worker program, and the O-1 program for individuals with extraordinary ability/achievement.

International students and scholars are integral to the instruction and research missions of our University. As Postdoctoral Scholars, Research and Teaching Assistants, Tutors, Academic Researchers, Faculty, Medical Residents, and many others, these workforces help our University secure over $6 billion in federal research grants, which in turn multiply our community’s growth in jobs and revenue. They also are key to instructing tens of thousands of undergraduate students. Removing these individuals from campuses or preventing them from entering the country would severely disrupt our strong collaborative working relationships that are vital to our ability to overcome the pandemic. Any policy that reverses or limits visas and related programs would undermine decades of collaborative work between the United States and our international partners in fields that contribute to health and economic security for all.

While massive unemployment from the pandemic is indeed a serious issue, the notion that immigrant workers contribute to unemployment is severely misguided, particularly given that the Joint Committee on Taxation found that the CARES Act will hand over $86 billion\(^1\) in tax breaks to wealthy businesses and individuals. International students and scholars are facing precarity due to relatively low incomes and lack of access to social support programs like unemployment and health insurance. Moreover, the economy would be severely impacted if immigration were restricted. Immigrant workers are successful job creators and entrepreneurs. Recent data\(^2\) shows that international students routinely stay in the U.S. to contribute knowledge and skills to solving some of our most pressing problems. Another study points out that unemployment would actually increase\(^3\) if immigration were restricted. Thus assertions such as those expressed by the May 7, 2020 letter sent to President Trump by Senators Cotton, Cruz, Grassley and Hawley are not borne out by evidence.

We therefore join the American Council on Education, American Association of Universities, NAFSA, and dozens of other national education-based organizations to encourage your agencies to take all necessary steps to urge the preservation and continuation of immigration programs and to preserve and expand non-immigrant programs.

Sincerely,
